Kelmscott Bookshop Newsletter for Mid-June, 2020

Susannah Horrom informs me that Kelmscott Bookshop has started doing 2 e-newsletters a month. The one sent on the first of the month contains news on book fairs, a notice of what's on sale, any relevant events or news, and featured items (usually new arrivals). The mid-month one is generally ONLY sale books. here's the bitly: https://bit.ly/Kelmscott_MidJune

Writing Bloc

This is a new site to me, and I thank Susannah Horrom for bringing my attention to it. Their website is www.WritingBloc.com. They're all about books, authors, and even indie bookstores. Etc. From their website: Their goal is to help indie authors by fostering connection, and providing the support needed to navigate the often-times-overwhelming world of publishing. Behind the scenes at Writing Bloc there are six authors, in various stages of their careers. Their number one goal: figure out what is missing in the writing community, and help provide it. They have so many exciting things on the horizon, and are eager to share them, including a podcast. Here's a link to their list of BlackLivesMatter books (in all genres): <https://bookshop.org/lists/minnesota-freedom-fund-book-list>

Literary Hub

Provides the best from the literary internet every day. Subscribe (free!) and get a constant flow of literary tidbits in your inbox. <https://lithub.com/about-literary-hub/>
From the June 16, 2020 Literary Hub, here's a link to a fascinating article about Dickens: <https://scroll.in/article/964405/why-fan-fiction-about-charles-dickens-life-is-just-as-much-a-part-of-his-literary-legacy>
