Kelmscott Bookshop June Newsletter 2022. Happy ALMOST summer!

This month we are having a sale on prints, art books, and photography. See below for details.

Later this month we will be participating in the RBMS Virtual Book Fair, which is hosted by the Antiquarian Booksellers' Association of America (ABAA). The fair will run from noon on June 21st through 8 pm on Friday, June 24th. Admission is free and we hope you can join us at abaa.org/vbf. Exhibitors will be featuring new acquisitions, discoveries, and rare finds.

We are featuring a selection of new arrivals below including an artist's book about the difficulties of traveling out of the USSR and the artist's experiences traveling in Mexico, Neil Gaiman's reimagined tale of Snow White in which she is a monster, a commemoration of the Basel Lantern Festival in which the lanterns often comment on politics and human rights issues, a historic guide to D.C., a cyber-themed tarot deck, a book about the devil, and more.

We will be in the shop in Savage Mill most weekdays this summer, so please give us a call or plan a visit.

Charles Tharp wanted to bring to your attention a talk that collections advisor Spencer Stewart (who has delivered several talks to the BIBS in the past) will be delivering on June 20: Object Location: Research & Acquisition. Use the link below for registration information. The session is free.

<https://www.worthwhile-magazine.com/articles/the-emerging-collector-a-series-for-worthwhile-magazine>

In this session we will first define the “routes to collectors”, that is where do you find what you are looking for. We will then review the various intelligence sources that are available to collectors as they seek to understand the ins and outs of the collecting ecosystem they are entering, or engaged in. Through this session, openness to all avenues of acquisition will be encouraged while guiding registrants through the unique dynamics that influence how value is determined at auction, through the Trade, or between collectors.

We will be exploring a variety of topics in and around the practice of collecting rare books, manuscripts, fine prints and photography. Closely related to the content discussed will be the article series Auction Industry Outlook available by following this link:
